Commercial and Chancery

Greg has practised in the fields of dispute resolution, litigation and arbitration for 37 years. His clients have ranged from international corporations, insurance companies, utility companies, local authorities, NHS trusts, private companies, LLPs, partnerships and individuals. He is regularly instructed to appear against leading KCs.

Greg has extensive experience in commercial litigation, chancery disputes (partnership and company disputes involving breach of directors duties, shareholder claims and section 994 petitions), arbitration and securing injunctive relief.

A significant part of his time is spent advising on and devising solutions to end disputes as quickly as possible before significant costs are incurred.

He undertakes drafting and review of contract documentation.

He is a member of COMBAR (Commercial Bar Association) and the Chancery Bar Association. He is also an arbitrator MRCIAB.

Commercial and Chancery Cases

Current and recent cases of interest:

Successfully defended High Court Chancery claim brought by a family member against his siblings alleging the existence of a partnership agreement, and breach of the same. Claimant sought damages/equitable compensation in excess of £15 million, representing his alleged share of the family's diverse business and property assets. The claimant's allegations centred on the existence of a quasi-partnership, joint venture, proprietary interest, proprietary estoppel, constructive and resulting trusts and a common intention constructive trust. The claim was very acrimonious and continued for many years with numerous complex interim applications made throughout the course of the proceedings, including a finding of contempt of court by the Vice Chancellor against two individuals supporting the claimant. The claimant was represented by various KCs and junior counsel whilst Greg acted as sole counsel.
